

Dunkirk is a 2017 war film written, directed, and co-produced by Christopher Nolan. The Film portrays the evacuation from three perspectives: land, sea, and air. It has little dialogue, as Nolan sought instead to create suspense from cinematography and music.

For the soldiers who were on land Dunkirk may have lasted a week. Those on water, the events lasted for a day. By air to Dunkirk, the British spitfires would carry one hour of fuel. Nolan provides the viewer with a glimpse of a week, a day and an hour from three separate perspectives.

In 1940, the Allies were beaten back by the Nazis across France to the northern port of Dunkirk. In the ultimate race against time, more than 300,000 Allied soldiers were evacuated across the Channel. This moment of German aggression was used by Winston Churchill as a call to Franklin Roosevelt to enter the war.
